This year's theme is "Tradies and their tools. " We're focusing on smoko, which is known mainly as a short break from work, originally associated with smoking cigarettes. While smoking remains relevant in some contexts, "Smoko" now refers to a brief rest, whether for a cigarette, a cup of tea, or just a quick break.

While traditional smoko might have involved sweeter and less healthy options, there are now more options like fresh fruit, vegetables with dips, nuts, and seeds.

However, that sounds a little too healthy for some of our hardworking tradies, so we'll stick to the more traditional, often less healthy options, home-made baking.

So, what will you make for your tradies' smoko box?

Option 1. An Anzac Slice with a twist! You can add any ingredient to the slice or perhaps a chocolate topping- a choice that's entirely up to you.

Option 2. Get creative! Cook your tradie's favourite smoko recipe and share a story about your tradie and why this recipe is their favourite.

Class 300 - Anzac Slice with a twist

Class 301 - Your Tradie's favourite smoko recipe (plus share a story about your tradie and why this is their favourite)

Our Local Tradies and their Tools

We all have trades people we call on in our daily lives to help in a wide range of situations. Our unique little pocket of the Far North Coast has been very fortunate to attract people who bring a variety of trades to our area. Traditional tradies are men with trades such as plumbers, mechanics, builders, electricians, painters, brick layers just to name a few. Australians are great for nick names and our tradies have been branded too. Bricky (bricklayers), Sparky (electrician), Chippy (carpenters), Grease Monkey (mechanic). In our modern world women share these trades and nick names too. Can you think of other trades and tradies that work in our area?
